9701 Black/White/Red Costa Maya by Chris Reightley ~ 72 x 72

After making my first Costa Maya, a group of friends saw the pattern and decided to make one also, so I made a second one with the group. I love this pattern! It is so versatile and looks so interesting in many different types of fabrics. Machine pieced. Longarm machine quilted by Naomi Human. 9702 Aboriginal Costa Maya by Chris Reightley ~ 72 x 72

A few years ago my daughter and I took a road trip to California. We visited a quilt shop in Sonoma and saw many quilts made from the Costa Maya pattern. I bought the pattern and made my first version from Aboriginal fabrics. Machine pieced. Longarm machine quilted by Becky Marshall. Design credit: Costa Maya by Margaret E Stone of Snow Day Designs.

9703 Costa Maya by Sally Greaby ~ 72 x 72

At a small quilt retreat, Linda Owens was working on this quilt and Chris Reightley told us she had made one also. So what happened - we all wanted to make one. I use bright colors. It's been fun to see what they look like with the different fabrics. Machine pieced. Domestic machine quilted. Design credit: Costa Maya by Margaret E Stone of Snow Day Designs.

9704 Costa Maya by Kerry Fondren ~ 72 x 72

Several of us Quilt Buddies decided to make the same quilt but with different fabrics. All blocks and borders are made from easy 15" blocks. Machine pieced. Domestic machine quilted. Design source: Commercial pattern. Design credit: Costa Maya by Margaret E Stone of Snow Day Designs.

9705 Costa Maya by Linda Owen ~ 72 x 72

My quilt story is very simple and short! I saw the pattern as another quilter was working on it, and had to have the pattern myself! I also was drawn in by the words on the front of the pattern that read, "Easier than it looks!" Machine pieced. Domestic machine quilted. Design source: Commercial pattern. Design credit: Costa Maya by Margaret E Stone of Snow Day Designs.
